The LexisNexis Prize in Legal Research, Analysis and Writing

Regulations

LexisNexis (the “Donor”), a leading legal publisher, will donate a prize to a Juris Doctor (JD) student of The Chinese University of Hong Kong in recognition of the student’s performance in the course Legal Research, Analysis and Writing (the “Course”) of the JD Programme starting from the academic year 2010-11. Regulations governing the award of the prize are detailed below:

1. The prize shall be known as “The LexisNexis Prize in Legal Research, Analysis and Writing”.

2. The value of the prize shall be HK$5,000.

3. The prize shall be awarded to a JD student who has satisfied the following criteria:

(a) completed the Course in that academic year with excellent academic result;
(b) is experienced in using LexisNexis online databases; and
(c) has strong communication and presentation skills.

4. Each year, the Faculty of Law represented by the Dean will select one prize recipient, and particulars of the prize recipient shall be sent to the Donor for endorsement.

5. The Faculty of Law’s decision in respect of the selection of the prize recipient for the award of the prize will be final.

6. The Donor shall notify the Faculty of Law prior to the beginning of any academic year if the donation shall be discontinued in that academic year.

April 2010