The Faculty of Law of The Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK LAW) was established in 2004. With an emphasis on very practice-oriented programmes delivered by first-class professors from over 20 different jurisdictions, the adoption of innovative teaching methods and last but not least the recruitment of a highly qualified student body, CUHK LAW has moved from strength to strength since then. The outstanding quality of our taught programmes is globally acknowledged and evidenced by collaborations with many leading law schools in the world. The research conducted by our professors and by our research students meets the highest standards and generates significant impact. We are proud that CUHK LAW is on a regular basis ranked amongst the top 50 law schools in the world. We are providing a truly global learning environment. In 2018 CUHK LAW was ranked by the Times Higher Education (THE) ranking exercise the most international law school worldwide.

Our PCLL programme is delivered by highly qualified teachers with many years of experience in private practice and in legal education. We focus on topical issues of great practical relevance so as to prepare our PCLL students for successful legal careers in the increasingly globalized and digitized legal arena. Message from the Programme Directors

Dennis Hie

The PCLL is the vocational stage of training and provides the transition between the academic stage of the qualification process and your entry to the legal profession. In your law degree, you have learnt the legal principles as an academic subject. During the PCLL, you will learn how to apply relevant legal principles in a practical setting. The tasks you are going to carry out during the PCLL look very much like the tasks that would be performed by a trainee solicitor or pupil barrister.

There is a significant emphasis on learning the skills you need for practice, so that you have the opportunity to "learn by doing". You will role play client interviews, make applications to court, draft letters of advice and formal legal documents. The opportunity to practise these skills in a classroom setting is invaluable - where your performance can be reviewed in an impartial and constructive way. It will make attempting the same in the harsher light of practice much less daunting. Our PCLL is also designed to enable you to acquire transferable skills and the ability to self-learn. These attributes will prepare you better for an increasingly demanding and fast changing legal practice.

The PCLL cohort at CUHK is a diverse group and the diversity ensures our discussions in the small group sessions are rich and lively. Our dedicated and highly experienced teachers promote and facilitate student participation. We encourage students to think about the topic at hand, and to create a safe environment for people to share their thoughts - to help everyone feel valued about the input they've offered.

I have had the pleasure of teaching CUHK PCLL programme since its inception and take pride in CUHK's friendly and supportive learning environment. I look forward to welcoming you to our programme - we are here to help you flourish, not just in your academic studies, but to ensure you hit the ground running at the start of your training contract or pupillage. Join us at CUHK, Hong Kong's most vibrant and dynamic law school.

Professor Dennis Hie
Programme Director of Postgraduate Certificate in Laws Programme

The best mindset to have for students taking our PCLL programme is "This is the first year of my professional life." This reflects the fact that the objective of the course is to prepare you for a life in practice whether as a solicitor or a barrister. This will mean that you will be well prepared to cope from day one when you start a training contract or a pupillage.

You must be prepared for the fact that the PCLL will be very different from your academic studies! While there will be some large group sessions to introduce you to key legal principles that you have not previously studied, the core of the course will be the small group sessions where you will carry out tasks that you would be expected to perform during your early years in practice. These small group sessions will make you aware of the different skill sets required to be a successful practitioner as compared to a good law student and crucially assist you in developing the fundamental skills required to be a good lawyer. These fundamental skills include not just knowing what the law is but how you can use this law in an effective commonsense way to assist your client in achieving the best outcome. This change of approach is quite challenging for most students who have been mainly used to learning and understanding the law and applying it to hypothetical and often unrealistic problem situations in their academic studies. In the small group sessions who will be provided with real life situations taken from practice (this makes the course very interesting!) and will be required to make judgment calls as to the best way to use your legal knowledge for the benefit of the client. Often you will hear your tutor say, "Yes you are correct in theory, but would this be a sensible and cost-efficient course of action to take on behalf of your client?"

I have had long experience of involvement in professional courses in England - I was formerly the Manchester Bar Vocational Course Director and when I joined CUHK I was immediately impressed not just with the structure of the CUHK PCLL but most importantly by the high quality of the teaching and in particular the empathy my fellow teachers show to the students on the course. They appreciate that learning non-academic legal skills may be challenging for some students and they provide students with a supportive environment to assist them in correcting inevitable mistakes.

Finally, could I emphasise that we expect our students to act professionally in their approach to the course. This means being punctual, meeting deadlines for all tasks set and participating fully in classes. The course is very much about learning by doing!

We are CUHK LAW! Join us and let our PCLL programme be the gateway to your future success in your legal career.

Deputy Programme Director of Postgraduate Certificate in Laws Programme

Summary of Key Facts

Our PCLL programme is a rigorous and innovative skills-based course that complements the traditional legal education you have thus far received. We design and teach the PCLL to give you a thorough and relevant working knowledge of the substantive and procedural law and skills that will serve you in practice.

Some key facts about the PCLL:

- Our PCLL is a one-year full-time programme.
- You will read for the PCLL in the Graduate Law Centre in the Bank of America Tower in the heart of Hong Kong's central business district.
- We will offer UGC and Distinguished Scholarship places to the most meritorious applicants.
- You will study a number of compulsory subjects and get to choose from a broad selection of elective subjects.

The focus of the PCLL is on equipping you with the skills with which you can apply your knowledge of substantive law.

On the PCLL we teach via Large Group Sessions (LGSs) and Small Group Sessions (SGSs). The main purpose of LGSs is to introduce to you the legal principles and skills in each subject. LGSs tend to be, though are not exclusively, teacher-led. In the small groups (SGSs) students go over material from their preparatory reading and LGSs. They also do SGS exercises on which teachers question students and give feedback. SGSs are heavily student-focused.

We employ various innovative methods to train and test students. On Trial Advocacy, for instance, we have numerous practitioners come in to give one-on-one feedback on students' recorded advocacy performances. Invited "Judges" preside over the final mini-trial assessment: these have included CFA Judges, the Chief Judge of the High Court, and very senior practitioners. On Civil and Criminal Litigation Practice we assess not only on paper but also by getting students on their feet to make applications. We frequently have guest speakers visit, from the professions and the judiciary, to teach particular techniques or principles, or to speak generally on their areas of expertise.

We have adopted on the PCLL a policy of continuous assessment. Among other benefits, this helps students to develop incrementally and gives teachers another tool to monitor and assess students' progress.

The Law Society of Hong Kong, the Hong Kong Bar Association, a number of law firms and others have donated prizes for students who attain top marks in various subjects.

Teaching

On the PCLL you will receive instruction from an accomplished pool of teachers. They hold legal qualifications from a number of jurisdictions, including Hong Kong, the UK, Australia, New Zealand and the United States. Nearly all have practised, and in some cases held senior positions in leading law firms, or barristers' chambers. Many have multi-jurisdictional experience; some across a broad range of practice areas. Several are still practising law as solicitors or barristers. They have substantial teaching experience, both of substantive law and on professional courses, in various jurisdictions including Hong Kong and the UK. You will find the curricula vitae of our teachers on our website at:

Course Descriptions

PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE

A sound knowledge of the principles of professional practice is essential for all lawyers. The public will not have confidence in the legal profession unless they know that every barrister and solicitor is bound by strict codes of professional conduct which, when necessary, will be enforced by disciplinary proceedings.

In this course, students study both the Code of Conduct of the Bar and the Solicitors' Guide to Professional Conduct. They consider realistic practical problems involving ethical issues that lawyers are likely to encounter in practice. They then apply the principles of proper professional conduct in working out for themselves, how to resolve those problems.

Solicitors regularly handle substantial sums of clients' money, for transactions such as the sale and purchase of real estate. To prepare students for the special responsibilities involved, this course also has a separate compulsory module on Solicitors' Accounts and Understanding Financial Statements.

CIVIL LITIGATION PRACTICE

In Civil Litigation Practice you will see how what you studied in Civil Procedure operates in the real world. You will come out of the course knowing how in practice to conduct civil litigation from first instructions to trial, how to draft correctly the various documents you will need along the way, and how to conduct the various types of application you may encounter.

CRIMINAL LITIGATION PRACTICE

As a junior lawyer working in the field of criminal law in Hong Kong you will be expected to demonstrate various practical skills, whether as a solicitor or barrister. In this course you will begin to learn those skills by following two criminal cases from start to finish. Along the way you will be required to perform both oral and written tasks, which demonstrate your practical abilities and build upon your existing knowledge of both criminal law and procedure.

PROPERTY AND PROBATE PRACTICE

This course teaches you to represent clients in property and probate matters. You will learn to draft a will, advise on intestacy, administer an estate, buy, sell and mortgage a flat and enter into a lease. Through a series of practical tasks, you will learn to conduct transactions and develop your professional skills and experience.

COMMERCIAL PRACTICE

The important role of commercial lawyers in Hong Kong cannot be overstated. This course is designed to serve as a foundation course for would-be trainee solicitors and pupil barristers. It will cover the law and practice of basic commercial transactions that are most likely to be handled by junior lawyers.

⬡ In Term 2 / Summer Term students read 5 elective subjects. Students choose electives according to their preferences, their career path (e.g. solicitor or barrister) and their firms' or chambers' requirements (if any).

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Alternative Dispute Resolution is becoming an increasingly important and technical area of practice, particularly in Hong Kong since the Civil Justice Reforms were implemented in 2009. Whether you intend to practise as a dispute resolution lawyer or as a transactional lawyer, this course will be useful to you in introducing the ADR legal framework in Hong Kong, as well as the skills involved in negotiation, mediation and arbitration.

CHINA PRACTICE

China practice has become one of the important practice areas in most major law firms and we recommend this course if you plan a career in such a firm. You will learn practical aspects relating to the latest developments in China's foreign investment and mergers & acquisitions regime.

CONFERENCE SKILLS AND OPINION WRITING

All lawyers meet with clients in conferences. Lawyers, particularly dispute resolution practitioners, give legal opinions. In practice the skills of the two disciplines are closely related. Sometimes you use your case analysis, questioning and advising skills in conferences with clients before you prepare an opinion based on what you learned and discussed in conference. At other times you write preliminary opinions based on, say, documents before meeting your clients to discuss your initial advice and to find out more about their matters. This course prepares you for these situations.

CORPORATE FINANCE

Hong Kong has in recent years overtaken New York and London as the world's top initial public offering (IPO) destination and is the key offshore capital-raising centre for Chinese companies. Corporate finance is, and will continue to be, a major area of practice in Hong Kong law firms. In this course, through examining case studies of real IPOs that made newspaper headlines, you will learn how to draft a prospectus and what insider dealing and market manipulation are. Most importantly, you will gain commercial awareness of the Hong Kong equity capital markets essential for a successful career as a corporate lawyer. At the end of the course, you will be equipped with drafting, project management and client-handling skills – and be confident that you are ready for a corporate training seat!

LENDING AND FINANCE

Lending and Finance focuses on matters of concern to transactions involving money including various forms of loan and facility agreements, real securities and quasi-securities, the terms of the relevant contracts, and the obligations, duties and powers of the parties. Background matters, which interact with the topics in this course, include contract law, property law, equity and trusts, company law, and insolvency. The course will also look at new forms of transactions and developments in the law relevant to maintaining Hong Kong's position as a leading international centre for financial transactions.

PERSONAL INJURIES PRACTICE

Personal Injuries Practice accounts for a significant proportion of civil claims filed in the courts of the Hong Kong SAR. It is an important area of practice for many barristers and solicitors. However, the procedures differ from those of civil litigation generally. The courts have a separate Practice Direction for personal injury cases as well as a specialist Personal Injury List. This means that all claims for personal injuries will be placed in the Personal Injury List and those trials will be before a judge with special expertise and experience in personal injury law and practice.

Civil Litigation Practice is a compulsory course during Term 1 of the PCLL Programme. It provides an introduction to civil litigation generally. It does not cover the specialist topics required by a solicitor or barrister to handle personal injury litigation.

This course is taught by a practitioner with extensive experience in acting for both plaintiffs and defendants in fatal and non-fatal cases. Students will study the special procedures relating to this area of litigation and will acquire practical knowledge of how to pursue and defend personal injury claims.

FAMILY LAW PRACTICE

The course will be taught by way of Large Group Sessions where substantive and procedural requirements for each topic will be delivered, along with Small Group Sessions where students will be able to consolidate learning on substantive and procedural issues. The Small Group Sessions will also have an emphasis on students being able to practice skills that are relevant to family practice in a supervised manner and in a supportive environment.

In terms of content, the course will focus on the legal and procedural requirements for entering into marriage and for terminating a marriage in Hong Kong. Matters ancillary to terminating a marriage, such as domestic violence, children's issues and financial issues will also be covered in detail.

TRIAL ADVOCACY (Taught over an intensive 2 weeks in the Summer Term)

Whether you become a litigation solicitor or a barrister, developing as a trial lawyer is a rewarding but arduous lifelong endeavour. In this course we teach you the fundamentals. The techniques and secrets of case preparation, opening and closing speeches, direct examination and cross examination are yours for the taking. The final assessment is a mini-trial in courtrooms in the High Court before real judges, senior barristers and solicitors.

WRITING AND DRAFTING COMMERCIAL DOCUMENTS

Remember that a badly drafted agreement or slavish reliance on precedents could get your client into trouble! It is one of the most important attributes of a commercial lawyer to be proficient at drafting commercial agreements. The course will endeavour to develop the skills necessary to achieve this in the context of joint venture, sale and purchase and guarantee agreements.

WRITING AND DRAFTING COMMERCIAL DOCUMENTS (IN CHINESE)

The ability to draft commercial documents in Chinese is a great asset for lawyers. This course provides intensive and skills-focused practical training in this respect. To cater for its unique nature which involves the application of both legal skills and Chinese language skills, the course will be taught by two teachers (one from CUHK LAW and the other from the Department of Chinese Language and Literature).

WRITING AND DRAFTING LITIGATION DOCUMENTS

This course is divided into 2 modules, Civil and Criminal. You will undertake class exercises designed to teach you those written skills which you will need in order to confront some of the drafting tasks you will face upon entering practice. In the Civil module you will build upon the drafting skills already developed in Civil Litigation Practice in Term 1 by tackling more complex and challenging documents, different areas of law and different drafting techniques. In the Criminal module you will learn how to draft indictments, skeleton arguments and grounds of appeal, as well as learn how to prepare more general structured submissions.

WRITING AND DRAFTING LITIGATION DOCUMENTS (IN CHINESE)

This course will provide practical training in writing and drafting litigation documents in Chinese in civil and in criminal proceedings. In light of the growing use of Chinese in litigation, in particular in cases involving litigants in person, this course will provide you with a good solid foundation in the use of Chinese in drafting litigation documents for your future professional development.

LEGAL PRACTICE AND TECHNOLOGY

This course is designed as the touchpoint between law and technology for future lawyers. It is divided into two parts - the first part examines how legal technologies are transforming conventional legal work (such as automated contract generation, robotic process automation for complex commercial transactions, and e-discovery for dispute resolution), while the second part investigates the application of law to novel situations involving the use of technology (such as data privacy in the context of virtual banks, online contracts and electronic signatures, and professional advisers' liabilities for artificial intelligence systems).

This is a practical course which cultivates in future lawyers the mentality to embrace technology in their legal practice, and equips them with the building blocks to analyse legal problems nuanced with evolving technologies. It serves to train future lawyers to speak confidently about technology and familiarize them the situations where they will encounter technology during the course of legal practice. This course is suitable for students with no prerequisite knowledge in technology.

We deliver the PCLL in the CUHK Graduate Law Centre (GLC). This is on the second floor of the Bank of America Tower in Central. The GLC is in the heart of Hong Kong's central business district. It is thus in amongst its major law firms and companies, and a stone's throw from the High Court. The GLC is equipped with facilities designed to optimise your learning experience. It has, for instance:

- the Warren Chan Moot Court, in which students practise advocacy skills.
- interactive lecture theatres and classrooms. These are all equipped with state-of-the-art facilities.
- an open student common area and a computer laboratory with online PCs for student use.
- breakout rooms for student study and discussion.
- Wifi internet access.

In addition, CUHK LAW has substantial resources on its main campus in Shatin. The facilities on the main campus are similar to those of the GLC. The main campus also houses the Lee Quo Wei Law Library, which PCLL students are welcome to use. The Lee Quo Wei Law Library contains one of the fastest-growing law collections in Asia. It has around 132,200 volumes of books, bound periodicals and other materials on law and law-related subjects. The Lee Quo Wei Law Library provides seating for students in a mix of individual study desks, open plan tables and 8 group study rooms. The Lee Quo Wei Law Library also contains 38 PC's and a fully wireless network for use by students with their own laptops. This collection is complemented by a growing array of online sources, over 6,000 e-journal titles, 114 law databases, as well as the interdisciplinary collections housed by the Chinese University of Hong Kong Library. The Learning Garden, located at LG/F of the University Library opens 24 x 7 for most of the year. The Research Commons at 1/F of the University Library is an area for research and collaborative activities for postgraduate students.

PCLL students will also have access to the Legal Resources Centre (LRC). The LRC is a service point of the Lee Quo Wei Law Library. It serves the legal information needs of the students and teachers at the GLC. It contains multiple copies of essential texts for courses run at the GLC, a small reference collection and various sets of case law and legislation. The essential texts are drawn from the main collection of the Lee Quo Wei Law Library and rotate in and out of the LRC according to the courses offered at the GLC each term. Students may request delivery of other books from the Lee Quo Wei Law Library free of charge. The 114 law databases for student use can be accessed from the PC facilities at the GLC, LRC, on campus and from home or other locations.

Library resources aside, PCLL students are also entitled to use the University sports facilities on campus and the University Health Service.

Facilities and Resources

Broader Education and Student Activities at CUHK

While studying at the Graduate Law Centre in Central, you may use the sporting and recreational facilities at the main campus in Shatin. You will also have the opportunity to join in a wide range of activities at the GLC itself.

You may attend various talks that are given on a variety of subjects outside the scope of the PCLL Programme. In particular, there are many career talks given throughout the year by leading law firms and barristers' chambers.

Mooting has always been a popular activity among PCLL students. They regularly form part of the Jessup Moot competition teams. This experience is excellent preparation for legal practice.

At the end of the course, PCLL students arrange a graduation party, at a venue of their choice. This popular event marks the successful competition of a demanding but rewarding course.

Career Success & Careers Facilities

Mr. Paul Mitchard QC
Director of Career Planning and Professionalism

The vast majority of those students who sit the PCLL move on to careers in legal practice, many in top firms and barristers' chambers, with some choosing to take legal positions in government or industry. Others move into areas where a law degree can give them a useful advantage – such as regulatory compliance, investment banking or financial services, with a number choosing to remain in academia. In all cases their achievements are testimony to their hard work and the quality of their education.

After graduating from the PCLL, most of our students move on to careers in legal practice, many in top firms and barristers' chambers. Some graduates choose to go into government or industry. Comments from the Professions

"PCLL is a very important stage of the legal training process leading to entry to the legal profession. As President of the Law Society and an External Examiner on the PCLL course, I maintain regular contact with PCLL students at CUHK. My general impression on them can be summarized in 3 Cs – Courteous, Confident and Competitive."

Huen Wong JP

"I have had the pleasure of being the mentor for a number of Chinese U PCLL and JD students and I have also participated from time to time in the University's advocacy examinations. I have also been fortunate enough to have some of their graduates as my pupils."

I can say at once, that the standard of those I have come across is extremely high and is a tribute to the quality of the instruction that they receive at Chinese University."

Comments from CUHK PCLL Graduates

We hope our students' association with CUHK LAW lasts well beyond their education. It is important that their memory of their time with us is both lasting and pleasurable. Some of the comments we have received from graduates after they have left us are:

"The CUHK PCLL Programme is an enriching experience that allows students to pursue their professional interests through the wide range of courses available. Having attended a full year of online learning from Singapore due to the Covid-19 situation, I am grateful for the dedicated teachers who were extremely generous with their time when answering questions outside of class and flexible in using various online platforms. CUHK LAW's non-teaching staff were also instrumental in facilitating a conducive online learning environment, enabling me to participate fully in the lectures, small group sessions, and examinations."

It was a privilege to be taught by leading academics and practitioners, who thoughtfully designed a curriculum that effectively strikes a balance between imparting their technical knowledge and equipping students with practical skills. The Programme is pragmatic at its core, as the teachers make full use of the small group sessions to help students apply their legal knowledge through practical tasks like drafting and advocacy. These interactive sessions give students opportunities to gain valuable insight into many facets of the legal profession in Hong Kong.

I highly recommend CUHK's PCLL Programme as it provides law graduates with the strong foundations needed to transition from legal education to professional practice. I am confident that the skills I have learnt will put me in good stead as I embark on my next chapter as a trainee solicitor."

Alicia Thea Ho

"The CUHK PCLL is an excellent bridge between law as an academic subject and law as a vocation. It provided me with an invaluable introduction to the work of a legal practitioner. I particularly enjoyed the highly interactive nature of the classes. For example, in the Corporate Finance course, I assumed the role of a solicitor pitching for work from an intended IPO issuer. And in the Trial Advocacy course, I stepped into the shoes of a barrister, delivering opening and closing submissions, and examining witnesses. Along the way, I received ample individual feedback from my instructors, who were invariably engaging and approachable."

During my year on the programme, I also took part in the International Criminal Court Moot. The team was led by an exceptionally dedicated member of CUHK LAW, who provided unwavering support and insightful feedback on our team's substantive arguments and advocacy skills."

Overall, I thoroughly enjoyed my year on the CUHK PCLL. In light of the difficulties presented by COVID-19, it would not have been possible but for the dedication and resourcefulness of all CUHK LAW members."

"As an international student who completed my LLB at CUHK, my studies at the CUHK PCLL Programme have been very fulfilling. The classes offered were interactive and informative."

There were a wide variety of courses that were offered, and I was able to choose the courses which I consider most useful for my legal practice in the future. Though the workload can be overwhelming at times, it challenged me as an individual and it prepared me to be more ready for the legal career ahead of me. The experienced professors at CUHK and small class tutorial setting provide students with an intimate and rewarding learning experience."

It is a great place to make new connections before joining the legal industry as every year the CUHK PCLL Programme accepts different students from various international and local backgrounds. The Programme is led by a team of professors with local and international legal experience; hence it is a great choice for students who want international exposure."

I highly recommend the CUHK PCLL Programme as it is a great learning platform for future legal practitioners."

"The CUHK PCLL Programme is designed to be the perfect bridge between academic studies and practice. We are taught and trained in various practical skills essential to become competent legal professionals. Above all, we learnt how to think like a lawyer, with not just the law in mind, but also the ability to see the big picture, from commercial realities to client expectations and objectives."

Besides the well-crafted courses, the CUHK PCLL Programme is also expertly taught by lecturers and professors who either are active practitioners or experienced former practitioners. They are very enthusiastic and keen to answer every single question you may have, and their courses are always interactive and highly enjoyable."

To me, the CUHK PCLL Programme has been a wonderful journey, and it is a course that I do not hesitate to recommend."

Cassidy Fan

"The CUHK PCLL Programme is a comprehensive and practical curriculum with an emphasis on core legal skills training and real-life application. It acted as a natural stepping-stone for me in the transition from being a law student to a trainee solicitor.

The Programme ensures students will be equipped with writing, drafting and oral advocacy skills required for a lawyer. Aside from the fundamentals, we also learnt soft skills such as how to manage clients' expectations. I particularly enjoyed Trial Advocacy, an intensive course that helped to enhance our advocacy skills extensively as we learnt about case preparation and the art of advocacy through active participation and receiving individual feedback.

The PCLL Programme was a rewarding experience and I am grateful for the support and constructive advice provided by our teachers who are all experienced legal practitioners in their field. They are enthusiastic, encouraging and are always keen to share their professional experience and thoughts outside the classroom."

"As someone that enjoys small-group interactive teaching, the CUHK PCLL Programme delivered an enriching experience that enabled me to apply legal knowledge gained in lectures to real life problems.

While the majority of my PCLL classes took place in an online setting due to the pandemic, every effort was made to replicate the in-person learning experience. I especially enjoyed the Lending and Finance elective, where a commercial banker was invited to role-play a client during a tutorial scenario. The experience was invaluable because it taught me two things: first, to communicate a legal perspective in a manner understandable to a lay client, and second, to identify non-legal, commercial issues which I could assist the client with.

To those looking for a legal education that focuses on practical skills solving client issues, I recommend the CUHK PCLL Programme."

Luke Yan
PCLL graduate 2020-21

"After completing the Juris Doctor Degree at CUHK, I was delighted to find that its PCLL programme allowed me to build on my practical knowledge in the legal industry. This one-year intensive programme emphasised and focused on practicalities and soft skills, skills that are significant in preparing us for the demands and challenges we will soon encounter as trainee solicitors.

What fascinates me about the programme is the wide range of elective subjects available to students to tailor to their interests and potential practice areas when entering into law firms. For instance, I am most confident that my knowledge in corporate finance and litigation practices will come in extremely handy during my traineeship years.

In addition, I also like the fact that students are put into small discussion groups, which facilitates interactive learning and definitely makes learning more enjoyable. Overall, I am more thankful that the PCLL programme was able to provide me with diverse opportunities, equip me with lawyering skills and the ability to build meaningful connections. Thus, I would highly recommend the PCLL programme at CUHK."

"My year with CUHK PCLL has been nothing short of remarkable. The programme is a lot more than teaching black-letter law — it places emphasis on being practical, diligent and coping with tight schedules.

CUHK PCLL offers a wide array of courses that caters to each student's interests and career paths - from drafting letters and commercial documents, to advocacy training. We were taught not only the relevant principles, but more importantly how to use them practically. The small class setting in tutorial sessions makes learning interactive and stimulating. Course instructors are often experienced practitioners themselves so that the teaching of legal knowledge is coupled with professional, hands-on experience. There are simulations of different legal work a lawyer may encounter, for example, I particularly enjoyed the simulation of client pitching and negotiation. In addition, students have the opportunities to meet judges in litigation courses, which provides a better insight of the legal world. No doubt, CUHK PCLL serves as a fundamental bridge between academic training and legal practice.

All in all, I am grateful for this fruitful journey and thank all CUHK LAW members and classmates for being supportive throughout."

Admission Requirements

The basis for admission to the PCLL Programme is academic merit.

The most important indicator of academic merit is your common law degree, usually a Bachelor of Laws or a Juris Doctor degree, though we also consider applicants with CPEs or GDLs.

Your law qualification will be assessed by reference to the classification, including grades, marks or other indicators of academic merit.

A limited number of PCLL places may be offered to candidates based on their academic merit, supplemented by evidence of law-related working experience (not including internships and mini-pupillages) of not less than two years' continuous duration. Such working experience must be evidenced by supporting documents.

Applicants must meet the eligibility requirements for admission to the PCLL set out in the statement issued by the Standing Committee on Legal Education and Training (available at <http://www.pcea.com.hk>). They must also hold a valid International English Language Testing System (IELTS) Certificate (academic module) with an overall score of 7 or above taken on a date which is not earlier than three years preceding the closing date for applications in the academic year in which applicants are seeking entry to the PCLL.
